To whom so ever it concerns

ICRISAT has acquired one copy of the NewGenLib software for use in the Library for all its activities. At present, functions of acquisition and circulation are being carried out on this software. Along with the conventional database, the software also host images database as well as digital copies of ICRISAT publications. In all the database holds approximately 80,000 plus records, of which close to 11000 records have links to the digital files. This collection also includes records received from our Regional Center in Africa. Recently this software has been modified to act as an Open Archives platform for ICRISAT Research publications. The search function run through the OPAC works on all the databases in an integrated form.

This software has been in use in the Library since 2005. Both the Library professionals (at both locations) and the user community are very happy with facilities and the functions available to them.
